

Rehabilitation of Offenders and Disclosures For Employment Purposes

The Rehabilitation of Offenders (Bailiwick of Guernsey) Law, 2002 provides for the rehabilitation of people who have been convicted of a crime. It means that after a certain amount of time, dependant on the sentence and providing no other offences have been committed, a conviction will become “spent”. Such a conviction should no longer appear on criminal records checks for employment purposes and does not have to be disclosed.

This table lists in broad terms the timescales involved. Further convictions may alter the “clear period”. Sentences of over 30 months imprisonment will never become spent.

Sentence	Clear Period
	Adult	Juvenile
6 – 30 months imprisonment	10 yrs	5 yrs
Up to 6 months imprisonment	7 yrs	3.5 yrs
Fine, community service	5 yrs	2.5 yrs
Probation, bind over	1 yr *	1 yr *
Caution	6 mths	6 mths

* if length of probation order or bind over is longer than 1 year the conviction will not become spent until the end of the sentence

Under the Rehabilitation of Offenders legislation and the associated Code of Practice spent convictions will not usually affect a person’s suitability for employment and need not be mentioned at any point in the recruitment process.

There are jobs that may attract a higher level of vetting and for which spent convictions will be required to be disclosed. These tend to be occupations where a conviction could indicate a need for risk management or elimination by the employer (for example child care) or where a higher degree of integrity is expected (for example law enforcement).

The Right Type of Disclosure

A Basic Disclosure is the right disclosure for most jobs within the Bailiwick. It provides details of convictions and/or cautions that are either relatively recent or of a serious nature and is suitable for most employment related criminal record checks.

However, there are some jobs (whether paid or voluntary) that require a higher level of disclosure. These tend to be jobs focused around the caring for or contact with children and vulnerable adults.

Alternatively, contact the Disclosure & Vetting Unit of Guernsey Police to discuss whether a higher level of disclosure would be appropriate.
